The AFA Crop Science Institute brings up to 75 talented college men and women together to take part in a three-day program. Students are selected through a competitive application process and have expressed a specific interest in the crop and soil sciences sector. The itinerary will provide interaction between students and crop sector leaders; expose students to area businesses and services; and include discussion and training to enhance student preparation for careers in the agriculture industry.

To learn more, visit www.agfuture.org/afacropscience.